Dear Msgr. Dyer:

Enclosed, please find three documents related to the allegations presented to your attention by Mr. REDACTED against Fr. Fidencio S. Silva-Flores, M.Sp.S.

The first of the documents is the "Report on the Interview with Fr. Fidencio Simon Silva-Flores on an allegation of Sexual Misconduct" dated April 7, 1995. This report comes directly from my personal notes taken during the interview in which you, Fr. Fidencio and myself were present. I wish you could review them to see if you would like to suggest any changes.

Re: Father Federico Silva Flores

Dear Cardinal Mahony and REDACTED

I am writing this letter to bring information to your attention regarding repeated molestation of a number of youth by Father Federico Silva Flores when he served at Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish in Oxnard. I am unable to locate Father Flores and I bring this to your attention so you can turn over any information you have of him to law enforcement. Please advise me of Father Flores' whereabouts and what action, if any, is being taken to prevent him from abusing others.

Your prompt attention to this is appreciated.

Very truly yours

8 Men Claim Former Oxnard Priest Sexually Abused Them as Children

Investigation: Police are pursuing allegations against a pastor now working in Mexico. Suits have been filed against him, his order and the L.A. Archdiocese.

By BETH SHUSTER and RICHARD WINTON
TIMES STAFF WRITERS

May 3 2002

Oxnard police are investigating allegations by eight men who say they were sexually abused as children at a church and on trips by a priest now working in Mexico.

The eight men, including two who are now police officers, sued Father Fidencio Silva, his order and the Archdiocese of Los Angeles on Thursday, alleging battery, negligent supervision and sexual abuse. Under California law intended to protect civil defendants in such cases, the four lawsuits did not name the priest or other defendants. However, the attorneys filing the lawsuits provided the names.

Oxnard Police Chief Art Lopez said his department has begun an investigation into the allegations of abuse by Silva. The lawsuits filed in Los Angeles Superior Court seek unspecified monetary damages. They allege Silva actively concealed the sexual exploitation of the boys and that church officials "knew or reasonably should have known" about the priest's conduct.

The suits accuse Silva, 45, of sexually abusing the boys from 1979 to about 1985 after becoming a pastor at Oxnard's Our Lady of Guadalupe parish. Some alleged abuses occurred during trips to Mexico, said Jeffrey R. Anderson, a St. Paul, Minn., attorney handling the case.

"This guy is a pedophile predator," Anderson said. "We have identified a total of 10 victims in a few years in Oxnard.... He is still out there and in position to ruin the lives of Mexican children. Our goal is prevention first, and maybe justice someday."

The men only recently confided the abuse to each other, they say. All are identified in the lawsuits as Juan Doe.

"He told me he was painting this Christ rising for Easter Sunday," said one of the men. "He was an artist and needed a model. He arranged for me to leave school and in the upper sacristy he asked me to disrobe... I remember in my mind thinking, 'How does my body compare to the body of Christ?' I think I was a seventh-grader."

The man, now 35, alleges that Silva took photographs of him naked and then committed a sex act, saying he needed the photographs for a sex education class.

The man was allegedly molested from 1979 to 1983, the suit alleges.

Larry Drivon, a Stockton attorney also representing the eight men, said Silva was "sent to a dump ground for predator priests in Mexico."

Silva, also known as Silva Flores, could not be reached in Mexico for comment.

However, in a TV interview aired this week with Joel Grover, a CBS-2 reporter, Silva denied he sexually abused his accusers.

Silva is a member of Missionaries of the Holy Spirit, a small Mexico-based order that provides services to bilingual parishes.

Joe Deems, an attorney for the order, said a letter from Anderson a few weeks ago was the first notice the order had received about abuse allegations against Silva. He would not comment on the lawsuit.

Deems said an adult in 1995 complained of sexual misconduct allegedly committed by Silva the year before.

The archdiocese required the order to investigate the allegation. It determined Silva did not commit a crime, Deems said, but because of the "appearance of impropriety" he was removed from his assignment.

"He was removed from his pastoral assignment and relocated back to Mexico," Deems said. Silva took a leave of absence and underwent "some counseling" and then was assigned to a retreat in San Luis Potosi, Mexico. He is permitted to say Mass and hear confessions, Deems said.

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles on Thursday, a 37-year-old former altar boy at Boyle Heights Church said he has reported to police that he was molested by a priest who was known for his work with Eastside gang members.

Lorenzo Najera alleged that the Rev. John Santillan molested him during the late 1970s, when Najera was age 12 through 17, at Santa Teresita Church.

He alleged the priest abused him in an upstairs bedroom of the church, during retreats in San Bernardino County and on a trip to Europe. He sued the priest in 1998 but the civil case was dismissed.

Santillan has been assigned to a parish in Bolivia since 1998.

"What proof does he have?" said Santillan when reached by La Opinion newspaper in the town of Cochabamba in Bolivia.

Oxnard men hope they'll help victims

Class-action suit might allow closure for abused, they say

By Tom Kistnen, kistnen@insidevc.com
July 18, 2002

Manuel Vega stepped in front of the camera and reporters at a press conference aimed at helping clergy-abuse victims come forward and clearly gave his name.

Dealing with pain and stigmas that cause many people to keep their accusations bottled inside, the Oxnard police officer and one-time altar boy said he's willing to be identified as a victim accusing a Catholic priest, who was also his godfather, of molesting him more than 20 years ago.

"There was an empowerment he had. He had an absolute power," Vega said on Wednesday, noting that going public is his way of regaining that power.

"I've seen people be victimized and sit there and cry and do nothing about it," he said.

Vega and Tranquiliño Gomez, an auto mechanic from Oxnard, are the lead plaintiffs in a class-action lawsuit that a lawyer said is intended to represent all child-molestation victims in the Archdiocese of the Los Angeles. It was filed Tuesday. The two men allege they and other altar boys were molested by the Rev. Fidencio Silva when he was an associate pastor at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Oxnard in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Silva denied the allegations in a television interview earlier this year in Mexico, where he was a priest with the Missionaries of the Holy Spirit religious order.

Vega said he looks at the priest, who was a close family friend, with emptiness. "There's no words to describe it," he said.

Vega is a decorated former Marine who won a community service award for his work with at-risk teens and was named the Oxnard Police Department's officer of the year for 2000.

He said the molestation, which included modeling nude for the priest's artwork, fondling and other sex acts, took place when he was 12 to 14 years old.

Gomez said he was molested by the priest at about the age of 13. He didn't tell anyone about the incident until he spoke to Vega several months ago.

Both men are still Catholics, though Vega said he has difficulty listening to a priest give a homily and at first felt as if he had lost his religion.

But "I'm not going to let him take that," he said of Silva.

As Vega and Gomez stood at the podium, three other men who allege that Silva abused them sat in the back. Two of them are Ventura County residents who asked for anonymity.

They talked about growing up in a Latino culture where Catholic priests are viewed as irrefutable authorities. They talked about the difficulty of telling parents about molestation. They said telling their stories means to relive them.

Lawyer Raymond Boucher said the class-action lawsuit is designed to give people a choice of maintaining some anonymity but still taking action.

Both of the lead plaintiffs were part of a group of eight former altar boys who sued Silva in May for alleged molestation in a case that has been folded into the class-action litigation. Boucher said lawyers involved in the case have learned of at least four others who make similar claims against Silva.

He said the lawyers have contact with more than 60 people who claim to have been molested by a priest or someone else connected with http://www.staronline.com/cr/cda/article_print/1,1250,VCS_226_1272666,00.html 7/18/2002 the church in the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, noting that the lawsuit is intended to represent them.

Gomez said he wants the church to stop covering up for the people whom Vega referred to as "the rot."

"If one of us had done it," he said of alleged molestations, "we would have been thrown in prison."

Tod Tamberg, spokesman for the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, referred to zero-tolerance policies, a reconstituted advisory board for dealing with clergy abuse and other measures as proof the church is reforming.

Noting he had no information about Silva's whereabouts in Mexico because the priest is under the jurisdiction of the order and not the archdiocese, Tamberg said the class-action suit could bring more healing.

"It's important to find an expedited way to resolve these cases for victims, their families and the church because we need to move forward to a brighter future," he said.

Priest Charged in Sex Abuse of Boys in Oxnard

Prosecutors are trying to find Father Fidencio Silva in connection with 25 counts of child molestation. He was last known to be stationed in Mexico.

A Catholic priest who used to be in charge of the altar-boy program at an Oxnard church was charged Thursday with 25 counts of child molestation by the Ventura County district attorney’s office.

After an investigation that took nearly a year, prosecutors are seeking an arrest warrant for Father Fidencio Silva, 53, who served at Our Lady of Guadalupe church from 1978 to 1988. They will start extradition proceedings after Silva, who as recently as 2002 was serving at a church in Mexico.

The criminal charges follow a lawsuit filed by eight men, including two corporate executives, an attorney and two police officers. They were altar boys, 11 to 15 years old, at the time who helped Silva at services, according to a spokesman for the district attorney’s office.

The criminal charges came as the clock was ticking on a state-imposed one-year limit between police learning of possible molestations and prosecutors filing charges. They also came with Easter just around the corner — a season of renewal especially meaningful this year for Manuel Vega, 36, an Oxnard police officer who is one of Silva’s accusers.

“What this does is not only for myself but other victims of Father Silva, it is validating us as victims,” said Vega, who this week urged a state Assembly committee to freeze the statute of limitations in child sex-abuse cases.

A Catholic priest who used to be in charge of the altar-boy program at an Oxnard church was charged Thursday with 25 counts of child molestation by the Ventura County district attorney's office.

After an investigation that took nearly a year, prosecutors are seeking an arrest warrant for Father Fidencio Silva, 36, who served at Our Lady of Guadalupe church from 1978 to 1986. They will start extradition proceedings when they locate Silva, who as recently as 2002 was serving at a church in Mexico.

The criminal charges follow a lawsuit filed by eight men, including two corporate executives, an attorney and two police officers. They were altar boys, 11 to 15 years old at the time, who helped out at services, according to a spokesman for the district attorney's office.

The criminal charges came as the clock was ticking on a state-imposed one-year limit between police learning of possible molestations and prosecutors filing charges. They also came with Easter just around the corner — a season of renewal especially meaningful this year for Manuel Vega, an Oxnard police officer who is one of Silva's accusers.

"What this does, not only for myself but other victims of Father Silva, is validate us as victims," said Vega, who this week urged a state Assembly committee to freeze the statute of limitations in child sex-abuse cases.

For so many years, we all lived with these horrific incidents in silence and shame," Vega said. "Now, we are one step closer to getting to the truth."

For nearly 30 years, Vega pushed memories of the abuse into his subconscious, he said. In fact, he met with the priest in 1991 to ask whether he would consider performing a marriage ceremony for him and his fiancée. But Vega said he felt strangely anxious in the meeting and backed away from the idea.

It wasn't until he left the Marines the next year and entered the police academy that recollections of the alleged acts began to emerge.

Privately grappling with his experiences, Vega tracked down other former altar boys who also claimed to have been molested by Silva at the church. In the retoric and on outings. The group hired attorneys to file suit against Silva, his order and the Los Angeles Archdiocese.

They also urged local prosecutors to take up the case.

On Thursday, Chief Assistant Dist. Atty. Patricia Murphy said the felony complaint caps a painstaking investigation into suspected sex abuse by Silva and at least two other Ventura County priests.

With the alleged crimes occurring so long ago, prosecutors have struggled to obtain evidence. They recently used a grand jury to subpoena witnesses and last month urged a judge to force the church to turn over documents. Joe Deems, an attorney for Silva's order, Missionaries of the Holy Spirit, could not be reached for comment. He told The Times last May that the order investigated Silva after a 1995 complaint and concluded he had not committed a crime.

Silva received counseling during a leave of absence, before taking his post in San Luis Potosi, a mountainous state in central Mexico, Deems said.

In an interview last year with a television reporter, Silva said he asked boys to model for paintings but denied molesting them.

Times staff writers TRACY WILSON, JENIFER RAGLAND and WILLIAM LODBELL contributed to this report.

Suspension Ordered for Oxnard Physician

A state prosecutor accuses the doctor of over-prescribing addictive narcotics.

Molestation Charges

OXNARD - The Ventura County District Attorney's Office on Thursday charged a former priest at the Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Oxnard with 25 counts of child molestation of eight youths occurring in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

The office filed a felony criminal complaint against the Rev. Fidencio Silva, 53, charging him with molesting the youths while he presided over the altar boy program at the Oxnard church.

"Silva had access to large numbers of boys as the head of the altar boy program and various youth ministries," said Ventura Deputy District Attorney Patrice Koenig. "Up until now our focus has been the victims, but the next issue will be locating him and evaluating his assignment and transfer history."

Authorities are seeking an arrest warrant.

Archdiocese spokesman Tod Tamberg did not return calls for comment.

The district attorney's action brings to a dozen the number of Catholic priests who have been criminally accused of molesting parishioners in Southern California.

According to church documents obtained by the Daily Journal, Silva was ordained in 1978. He was the director of the Key of Life Youth Group from 1979 to 1982, and director of the Spanish Youth Group from 1980 to 1986 at Our Lady of Guadalupe.

In 1986, church records show that he left the Los Angeles archdiocese.

He returned in 1989, according to the church documents, when he was in residence at the Missionaries of the Holy Spirit in Playa del Rey.

Between 1991 and 1993, Silva ministered to young adults, according to the documents.

Silva left the archdiocese in 1995 and moved to Mexico, where authorities believe he now resides.

Id start in Valley, LaBonge proposes

LaBonge is working on a proposal to open the Cahuna Pass and eastern Station in downtown Los Angeles, he said that we are coming close to completing the marathon's 20th year, there better time to rethink the future of our neighborhoods at the same time.

Marie Patrick, executive vice president of the marathon, said organizers are discussing LaBonge's proposal, and a decision will be made soon.

"He is proposing a major change from a looped course to one that would be a location-to-location race," Patrick said. "That's completely different from what we've been doing."

"There are a lot of factors to take into consideration, including the changes runners would have to cross."

Cell Doors Swing Open After Ruling on Molestation Cases

By Tracy Wilson and Megan Garvey
Time Staff Writers

It was 2:26 a.m., and the night shift was one of the few cold calls a 63-year-old defrocked priest swelling trial on charges of molesting four altar boys at the historic San Gabriel Mission left Los Angeles County Jail after less than a week behind bars.

Twelve hours later, Michael Weinberg, left his jail cell with a smile on his face. The 63-year-old retired priest, whose bail had been reduced to $2 million, walked through the Inmate Reception Center's main entrance. He had been held on $2-million bail on charges of molesting five boys 20 years ago.

FREED: Retired priest Michael Weinberg, center, walks out of County Jail in Los Angeles after a judge ordered his release on his own recognizance. He had been held on $2-million bail on charges of molesting five boys 20 years ago.

RERELATED STORY

Burden of proof: Hundreds of civil cases are also affected. A judge had violated the Constitution’s ban on ex post facto — after the fact — laws when the Legislature decided to change the time limit for bringing criminal charges in child sex-abuse cases and made the new limit retroactive to cover long-ago cases.

For many prosecutors, victim advocates and police, the court’s decision was hard to take. The affected cases all involve not just allegations of abuse, but strong corroborating evidence which was required under...
Freedom for Many in Child Molestation Cases

If anyone wanted a peek at the legal conundrum in Los Angeles, Los Angeles Times reporter Charles R. Fawley had just the story for them.

The case involved a Catholic priest accused of molesting a boy in the 1980s, but the ruling was overturned, allowing the priest to remain in the priesthood.

Fawley, a seasoned journalist, had tracked down the priest and written extensively about the case, which had garnered national attention. He had interviewed the priest, the victim, and other key players in the case, including law enforcement and legal professionals.

The story was published in The Nation, a well-respected news magazine, and became a significant event in the ongoing debate over child molestation in the Catholic Church.

Fawley's reporting shed light on the complex legal and ethical issues surrounding cases of child abuse, and his work contributed to a broader conversation about accountability and justice in the face of such crimes.
Priest Charged in Sex Abuse of Boys in Oxnard

Prosecutors are trying to find a priest charged in sex abuse of boys in Oxnard in connection with 25 counts of child molestation.

A Catholic priest who used to be in charge of the Oxnard program at an Oxnard church was charged Thursday with 25 counts of child molestation by the Ventura County district attorney's office.

After an investigation that lasted nearly a year, investigators are seeking an arrest warrant for Father Francisco Silva, 58, who served at Our Lady of Lourdes Church from 1978 to 1996. They will start the extradition proceedings when they locate Silva, who is thought to be in Mexico.

The criminal allegations first surfaced in September and led to the California attorney general's investigation a year later. Silva is charged with seven counts of sexual misconduct with a minor, which carry a sentence of 14 to 24 years of prison.

In a booking photo, Silva was charged with seven counts of sexual misconduct with a minor, which carry a sentence of 14 to 24 years of prison.

The criminal charges came as the case was being tried in a state-run, year-long trial between the two priests and the alleged victims.

Prosecutors and investigators met with Silva and other priests who served at the church, and the alleged victims.

In an interview last year with a television reporter, Silva said he had not committed any crimes.

In a December interview, Silva denied the allegations.

The alleged crimes occurred during a nine-year period between 1978 and 1996.

Molestation Charges

Oxnard - The Ventura County District Attorney's Office on Thursday charged a former priest at the Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Oxnard with 25 counts of child molestation of eight youths occurring in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

The office filed a felony criminal complaint against the Rev. Fidencio Silva, 53, charging him with molesting the youths while he presided over the altar boy program at the Oxnard church.

"Silva had access to large numbers of boys as the head of the altar boy program and various youth ministries," said Ventura Deputy District Attorney Patrice Koenig. "Up until now our focus has been the victims, but the next issue will be locating him and evaluating his assignment and transfer history."

Authorities are seeking an arrest warrant.

Archdiocese spokesman Tod Tamberg did not return calls for comment.

The district attorney's action brings to a dozen the number of Catholic priests who have been criminally accused of molesting parishioners in Southern California.

According to church documents obtained by the Daily Journal, Silva was ordained in 1978. He was the director of the Key of Life Youth Group from 1979 to 1982, and director of the Spanish Youth Group from 1980 to 1986 at Our Lady of Guadalupe.

In 1986, church records show that he left the Los Angeles archdiocese.

He returned in 1989, according to the church documents, when he was in residence at the Missionaries of the Holy Spirit in Playa del Rey.

Between 1991 and 1993, Silva ministered to young adults, according to the documents.

Silva left the archdiocese in 1995 and moved to Mexico, where authorities believe he now resides.

Priest Charged in Sex Abuse of Boys in Oxnard

Prosecutors are trying to find Father Edencio Silva in connection with 25 counts of child molestation. He was last known to be stationed in Mexico.

BY STEVE CHATWORTH AND FRED ALVAREZ

A Catholic priest and former father of the abused boys in the church, 25-year-old Silva was charged Thursday with 25 counts of child molestation by the Ventura County district attorney.

The investigation began after a group of former altar boys claimed to have been molested by Silva at the church in the 1970s and 1980s. The group hired an attorney to file a lawsuit against Silva and other priests in the Los Angeles archdiocese.

They also filed a complaint to the state attorney general's office in December. Silva denied the allegations, saying he had no memory of the incidents.

The charges come after Silva's release from prison in 1999, after being convicted of molesting another altar boy in 1994.

For nearly 20 years, Silva pushed the allegations of abuse into his subconscious, he said. In fact, he met with the priest in 1991 to ask whether he would consider performing a marriage ceremony for him and his fiancée. But Silva said he felt anxious in the meeting and broke away from the idea.

It wasn't until he left the Marines the next year and entered the police academy that recollections of the alleged acts began to emerge.

Privately grappling with his experiences, Silva tracked down other former altar boys who also
